Subject: Comments on low-income rate assistance

Kathy, I used to work for Kennewick Irrigation District in WA state. There we had an assistance program called Helping Hands. Each bill stub had a blank space where the customer had the option to write the amount he or she chose to contribute. For example, if I wanted to contribute $20 and my bill was $100, I would write $20 in the Helping Hands box on my bill stub and I would write my check for $120. My $20 contribution would be put in the Helping Hands fund, and would be available for eligible customers.
